I met Mr. Richard Gage, founder of Architects and Engineers for 9/11 Truth (<http://www.ae911truth.org>) on May 16th at MIT, Cambridge, MA. Before I met him, I was wondering what kind of person he could be, so I looked for some pictures of him in the Net, in order to know how he looked like and what kind of person he could be.

When I got into the room 5-134 at MIT, I found him standing beside the board, in front of a small group of engineers and architects. I was received for him, with a smile and a gentle and confidence look directly into my eyes. The personal impression was great, even I was a little bite impress because his self-confidence.

Richard seemed to me a very trustful person, really committed in proving to everyone the truth about what really was happened on 9/11, at least about what as Architect he can proves about why and how the WTC's Twin Towers and Building 7 collapsed.

Being with him and all his supporters, listening the testimony from other professors and professionals involved in this association, I could see, I could feel the enormous fight they are facing, and the enormous personal and, so many times, professional sacrifice they are doing in order to let the people knows what really was happened on the fatal September 11th.
